

Problem Statement

In Artificial Intelligence, game-playing systems need to examine different possible moves to select the best move. The Minimax algorithm can require searching many nodes in a game tree, which increases the computational cost. Alpha-Beta Pruning improves this process by removing branches that do not need to be explored while producing the same optimal result as Minimax.