

Solution

The problem can be solved using a state-space search approach, where each state represents the number of missionaries, cannibals, and the position of the boat on each side of the river. Valid states are generated by moving one or two people using the boat, while invalid states are rejected. The search continues until all missionaries and cannibals reach the opposite side safely.